A New Look at the Amelia Earhart Mystery

- I Amelia Earhart is well known for being a female pilot at a time when it was still not completely acceptable for women even to drive cars. Nevertheless, she is probably best remembered because of her mysterious disappearance. Recently, however, new evidence has been found that could shed light on what happened to Earhart and her crew.
- II Earhart first became interested in flying when she flew in an aeroplane at an air show. She decided to learn to fly and became only one of 16 women to get a pilot's licence at that time. In 1922, she broke the world altitude record for female pilots. Six years later, she became the first woman to fly across the Atlantic Ocean.
- III In May 1937, she began her attempt to fly around the world. She put together a crew of three men, two of whom left the flight before the fatal stage in which Earhart's plane vanished without a trace on its way to Howland Island in the Pacific Ocean.
- IV Although people assumed that the plane came down in the middle of the ocean, investigator Ric Gillespie has recently noticed a silver-coloured spot on the plane in a picture taken just before Earhart set off on her doomed flight. He believes that this was a repair made to the plane and hopes that when investigated, it will show that the spot matches a piece of aeroplane wreckage that was found in 1991 on Gardner Island, which is about 600 km away from Howland Island.
- V If it does match, it could confirm Gillespie's theory that Earhart did not die instantly when the plane crashed in the ocean. Instead, the plane may have had a malfunction, causing Earhart to make an emergency landing on the small deserted island. This meant that she may have died from starvation, thirst and disease while waiting in vain to be rescued.
- VI Although more than 100 shortwave radio listeners reported hearing calls for help from a woman identifying herself as Earhart, these were regarded as fakes because it was believed that she had crashed into the ocean. Maybe if they had been taken seriously by the authorities, the story of Amelia Earhart could have had a happy ending.

Do you know the films Beverly Hills Chihuahua, Charlie's Angels or Whip It? They are all films with the actress Drew Barrymore.

Drew was born in California, USA in 1975. She comes from a family of famous actors, including her grandfather John Barrymore and his wife Dolores Costello. Her parents were actors and some of her aunts and uncles were actors, too. With that family history, it was very natural for Drew to become an actress.

Drew's first acting job was in 1976. She was 11 months old. At the age of four, Drew was in her first film, but she became famous at age seven. She was the young daughter Gertie in Steven Spielberg's famous film E.T. the Extra-Terrestrial.

It wasn't easy being a famous child, and Drew's teen years were quite difficult. At 19, she fell in love and got married, but she got divorced the next month.

But that is all in the past. Today, Drew is an actress, a director and a producer. She's got a Golden Globe Award and MTV Movie Awards. She's got a film company, too. Drew Barrymore is happy.

Len Parkins is 24 and for the past three years he has worked in a bank in a small town in the north of England. There is nothing unusual or surprising about Len's appearance. He is of average height, neither fat nor thin, and his face is pleasant but quite ordinary. For work, at least, Len dresses conservatively. Today, for instance, he is wearing a dark suit, white shirt, blue tie and black shoes. Len, however, is living proof that appearances can be deceptive. 'I look like this because it's what people expect of me in this job', says Len. 'This is a small place and people are friendly but they have certain expectations. They don't want to come into their local bank to be served by someone with green hair and a ring through his nose. I actually like body art and modern clothes but they aren't acceptable at the bank. Of course I can wear what I want in the evenings and at weekends. I can also have piercings and tattoos but they can't be too obvious.'

In fact, Len has tattoos all over his upper body and arms. Some of them are very intricate and colourful. They are not visible at work because he wears long-sleeved shirts. He also has a piercing through his navel and he is thinking of having his nipples pierced too. Len says this is his way of rebelling a little against the world of work and routine. He seems to be conforming, but underneath his clothes he shows his creative side by adorning his body in different ways. 'People think that if you work in a bank, you are a boring person with no interest in fashion,' says Len. 'At weekends I don't dress like this at all. I love jeans, T-shirts and bright colours. I would like to experiment more with different hair styles too, but my job makes it difficult.' Len's work uniform of suit, shirt and tie might lead you to believe that his taste in music is on the conservative side too. In fact, he has an extremely varied and up-to-date collection of CDs. R'n'B and hip hop are favourites at the moment. He is also into world music and can talk for hours about the delights of flamenco and fado.

'I enjoy surprising people,' he says. 'When I meet someone outside work who's seen me in the bank, they always look a bit surprised because I look so different. It just shows that you can't judge a book by its cover!'

TV ADS BY SARAH STEVENS I was watching TV the other night, and - as usual - there were all those irritating advertisements in the middle of the movie, disturbing my concentration! Well, I don't usually take any notice of the ads. In fact, I almost always turn the volume down when they're on, because they're so boring. But this time I'm not really sure what happened to me. One ad caught my attention. It was for a smartphone, and I was actually thinking of getting one at the time. So anyway, I decided to go for it, and I ordered one. The advertisement made it sound so wonderful! Well, it arrived a few days later. It was super fast, and at first I was impressed. However, I really regret it now. I'm not at all happy with it, and I'm sure it's broken. For example, I texted a friend yesterday, and the message went to the wrong person! That's terrible - and it could be very embarrassing too. Another thing is, the battery doesn't last for very long. I charged it a few hours ago, but it's almost dead again already. It's very disappointing and I hope they give me my money back.
